Crown Lands

Crown lands are publicly owned land that fall under either federal or provincial management. Most crown land in New Brunswick remains in private ownership; and do not include provisions for public access. Conserved land data for New Brunswick comes from the Maine Conserved Lands coverage published by the Office of GIS. The data include land that is held directly by state, federal and local governments as well as land that is owned by land trusts. Land protected by easements are also included. Some parcels are also protected land that is legally designated as a park, refuge or other conservation area for public access.

Conserved Land

Public and conserved lands data for the State of Maine comes from the Maine Conserved Lands coverage published by the Office of GIS. The data include land that is held directly by state, federal and local governments as well as land that is owned by land trusts. Land protected by easements are also included. Some parcels are also protected land that is legally designated as a park, refuge or other conservation area for public access.

Federal, State and Provincial Parks

Also including US National Wildlife Refuges (NWR), which are managed primarily to protect wildlife and wildlife habitat. Also including US National Wildlife Refuges (NWR), which are managed primarily to protect wildlife and wildlife habitat.